A message
for you from:

Dr. Henry Kissinger,
Senator Henry Jackson,
George Will, and others...

...about a primary Washington source for people with special concerns in international policymaking.

Every serious student of foreign policy realizes that the normal sources of information are woefully inadequate. Newspapers can not cover major developments around the world in sufficient detail because of lack of space. Television and radio

The Washington Quarterly aims at "an up-to-date analysis of events and to report on countries whose doings are usually ignored by the press until a crisis blows up."

are so concerned with "hot scoops" and the latest bulletins that they can not put events in proper perspective. Academic publications are often so abstract that they lose touch with the human values and emotional factors so important in international issues.

Now one publication has overcome these problems. The Washington Quarterly.

"Provocative, perceptive and indispensable."

SENATOR
HENRY M.
JACKSON

Published just four times a year, this new journal has the time and space to present clear and complete discussions of the most significant developments around the world. In government, business, and academia, The Washington Quarterly is already a primary source.

Based in Washington, the staff of The Washington Quarterly maintains daily contact with the people who make American foreign policy. Correspondents overseas

DR. HENRY A. KISSINGER

"The Washington Quarterly is an excellent resource outside government that penetrates deeply into world affairs. It gives you the kind of briefing people in the top echelons of government and business require before making an important decision. And it is at the center of the public debate on America's foreign policy decisions."
